

Alyson Hazen Kristensen, MPH
Senior Fellow and Program Officer

Alyson Kristensen is a senior fellow and program officer at Partnership for Prevention. She is the lead for the organization's physical activity, nutrition, and obesity activities and currently directs its childhood obesity project. She also manages the organization's communications activities and provides writing and research support to other projects. While at Partnership, Ms. Kristensen has been involved in several of its largest initiatives, including the National Commission on Prevention Priorities (NCCPP), the National Chlamydia Coalition (NCC), and The Community Health Promotion Handbook.

Prior to joining Partnership, Ms. Kristensen worked for six years at The Institute for Genomic Research (now part of the J. Craig Venter Institute) in Rockville, MD. She also worked for a year in Tanzania with several local organizations on projects addressing HIV/AIDS and children's health.

Ms. Kristensen holds a master of public health from the University of Alabama at Birmingham and a bachelor of science from the University of Pittsburgh. She is a member of the Delta Omega Honorary Society in Public Health.